Pole in park precarious:

Council ponders flagpoles, trucks in residential district

The flag pole in Devendorf Park and trucks parked in residential areas took most of the discussion time in last night's fast-paced Carmel city council meeting.

The 60-foot wooden flag pole about 20 years old, has damp rot, according to city clerk Hugh Bayless. "While it's not going to fall on anybody today or tomorrow, it is seriously weakened," he said.

Bayless had inquired on the cost of replacing the pole. "No one even wanted to talk about a 60-foot pole," he said, "But we can get a 45-foot steel pole for $685, and a 40-foot aluminum pole that doesn't have to be painted for $878 or a 35-foot fiberglass pole for $635."

All prices assumed the city would install the pole.

Councilman Bernard Anderson asked about the possibility of stubbing the pole, or cutting off the infected area. Bayless said the rot extended about 12 feet from the bottom, and stubbing might be possible.

He was instructed to investigate how far the rot had extended, and determine the cost of stubbing.

Councilmen Eben Whittlesey and Frank Falge again opposed each other in a discussion of whether residents should be allowed to park trucks by their residential homes.

A proposed ordinance stated that trucks would not be allowed to be parked in front of a home if other parking space was available without a permit from the council.

Several citizens had complained at the last city council meeting of trucks considered eyesores parked at the same location for long periods of time.

"I find it offensive that nobody objects to parking a Lincoln Continental on the street, but that it seems to be objectionable if a perfectly respectable truck, that might say something like 'Whittlesey Dairy Products', should not be allowed to park there," said Whittlesey.

"This isn't Hillsbourough, and I hope it never will be."

"There may be a situation where a man has a plumbing truck and his wife has a car. This ordinance is saying that the wife would have to park her car on the street so the man could park his truck in the garage.

"Also, the problem has usually been related to large vehicles, not panelled or pick-up trucks," he continued.

"There are two things you are forgetting," objected councilman Falge. "First, the ordinance says that you can get a permit if there is no other place you can park the truck.

"Second, you say that the problem has been mainly large trucks. This is not necessarily the case. The two complaints we heard last week were due to pick-up trucks, and I believe the police department knows of a number of others that have been in the same place longer than three days.

"If a man came in and said he was taking home his employer's truck and he had a 25-foot lot with no driveway, he would certainly be granted a permit," Falge said later.

"But a man with a 40-foot lot and a 2-car garage with two cars wouldn't be able to get one?" asked Whittlesey.

"We would let him park," sighed Falge.

"Under what conditions would the permit be denied then?" Whittlesey asked.

"If the man had a place to park it off the street, maybe a driveway," said Falge.

"I don't think a driveway is any more esthetic than the street, Mayor Barney Laiolo said.

The mayor then asked the audience of about 30 people what they thought of the problem.

"If the owner isn't blocking traffic it seems perfectly all right to me," volunteered Carmelite Roland Pilon.

"You wouldn't object if your neighbor had a truck? Some people get pretty tired of seeing the same truck all the time," said councilman Anderson.

"A man has a right to make a living," answered Pilon.

The mayor asked police chief Clyde Klaumann to make a study of how many trucks were parked on the street at night, and the council sent the ordinances back to committee.

Carmel ended up paying only about $200 of the $7000 cost of taking the Disclosure of Assets law to the supreme court, according to clerk Hugh Bayless.

City attorney W.B. Burleigh was recently named California "city attorney of the year" for his successful case against the law.

"Contributions from other cities and officials have now almost equalled the cost," said Bayless

The council denied one request for space at Sunset Cultural Center, accepted another, and granted the center a movie camera.

Edwin McCurry, former principal of River school, had requested space to open a private school in the center. The council refused.

"It is very important that we keep in mind the purpose we have for Sunset," said the mayor. "We feel it would present problems to the other tenants to have children with their natural boisterous enthusiasm running around. With the possibility of the post office and the library moving to Sunset we're not going to have a lot of space for children to play.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Brown were granted a one year lease to operate a sculpture and ceramics workshop in the center. Usually leases are granted on a month-to-month basis, with the only exception being the Friends of Photography.

"We feel you need us, not that we need you," said Brown. "If there are no one-year leases because you have delayed making a master plan for the building, we're not interested.

"We're intending to put in $3-4 thousand of equipment. We're willing to spend more money for a one year lease than you now charge for month to month basis."

The council granted the Brown's a one year lease with a raise in the rent.

The council also authorized that a Bell and Howell 556 projector be purchased for the center.

In other action the council:

● Agreed to negotiate for an area near Castroville by the twin bridge on the Salinas river to which the city can tow abandoned cars.

● Authorized the superintendent of public works to place "No Stopping or Standing" signs on Ocean Ave. between Junipero Ave. and the eastern limit of the city.

● Voted to not collect dues for the Carmel Employees Association because the dues may make new employees feel that joining the association is required or expected by the city. "Every employee should feel completely free to join the association or not, as he chooses," reported Whittlesey.

● Hired Gerald A. Pullen as a police officer, Raymond W. George as temporary police officer, and John Hicks as fire engineer.

Ban on filming movies here?

The recent filming of a movie titled "Thumb Tripping" in the Mediterranean Market and other Carmel landmarks prompted consideration of an ordinance regulating movie making in Carmel at the city council meeting last night.

The ordinance, as initially accepted by the council, would have prohibited any person on any public property in the city to film, or otherwise record, scenes and action in Carmel, or to obstruct public property while filming on private property.

The above would, however, be permissable with the written permission of the council. Amateurs making non-commercial films with only one other person were excepted from the proposed ordinance.

Walter Spear spoke to the council on behalf of the motion picture and television industry.

"This last picture, which was a low budget picture -- under $1 million -- needed 24 days in Monterey County," he said. "They had a budget of $10,000 a day, of which about $7,000 was spent locally.

"The money went for such things as housing, catered food, clothes, rented and purchased cars, props, heavy equipment, renting of seven theaters to see the daily film, location fees, security police, professional assistants such as nurses, and local stand-ins," according to Spear.

Spear's main objection to the ordinance was the difficulty of obtaining it, which he said would discourage companies from filming in the area.

The ordinance requested that any person wishing to film would have to submit in wiriting a request to the city clerk, who would then place the request on the next regular meeting of the city council.

"I've had as little as 24 hours' notice that a company wanted to come into the area," he said. "A waiting period of up to a month would prohibit companies from coming, in some cases, and at least in their own minds, give a bad name to Carmel."

He recommended that the council: (1) increase the license fee from a proposed $100 to $150; (2) specify that the fee would be returned if no filming occurred; and, (3) keep the ordinance sufficiently flexible so that an answer to the request would be given within 24 hours by polling the council.

"I don't recall ever having an issue made on the time factor before," said councilman Eben Whittlesey.

Mayor Barney Laiolo also questioned Spear. "There are two or three things that made this last movie objectionable," he said. "The nature of the film was not made known to us in advance; we don't want to be known as a 'hippie town'. We were given the impression they would only be here about four hours and they were here much longer. And the time to make movies in Carmel is not the height of the summer tourist season.

"There's a lot of good that comes from making a movie, but there's also a lot of merchants that are not affected."

"I suppose you could say that about every issue that comes up," answered Spear.

"Half the money in this town comes from the residents, and they were annoyed. Also I don't know how many extra policemen we had to pay to police the area," councilman Anderson added.

"Two policemen were used, and they were paid by the movie company," said Spear.

The ordinance was sent back for more discussion.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

I just returned from the Fourth of July parade in Seaside. Without a doubt I think it was the best parade they have put on to date. The drill teams, the bands and the floats were quite exceptional. As to be expected, there were a few dissidents who would have loved to cause problems and from some of the earlier reports this was their intent. I feel that the way this situation was handled is commendable. This small minority was allowed a place in the parade, but not a main event. They paraded on the sidelines with their placards and then dispersed into the crowd. The City of Seaside and the Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated on producing such a fine display. I heartily support their efforts.

It was interesting to see our Fire Department in operation the other night. They are in the process of burning down an old building on Mission Street. The house has been condemned. They have organized a fire protection and study project for this house. At present they are working with smoke problems that might be encountered in fighting a fire, and are burning paper, etc., to create the same situation they might encounter in a real fire. They approached this with gas masks and various chemicals to teach the crew how to handle this particular problem.

After this part of the test is completed, they will make other test cases and finally will burn the complete structure utilizing every advantage to improve the health and safety to the men as well as the community.

Some people have commented about what we're doing on seeing several pieces of equipment and the crew of regular firemen and dedicated volunteers working on this project. It is not a waste of time and energy, but a well planned exercise for the good of all. I commend all those connected with this for a good job well planned and done.

xxx

The final clean-up of San Antonio Street and the covering of the last big hole below Ocean is completed. This has been a long and tedious job. I wish again to thank the many residents who have been inconvenienced by this and know they will be happy to see it clean again.

xxx

In checking our police records, it is apparent that the Fourth of July weekend has been quite good. There were only a few minor accidents, also two car clouts, some cases of noisy parties, and also quite a few lost articles returned to the police which were found at various parts of town.

xxx

The comments regarding our notice to visitors leaflet have been most encouraging. I'd like to again thank the American Legion for their fine show of dedicated citizenry.

In closing a little quip—just give me the facts—I'll make my own confusions.

School board to adopt budget next week

The 1970-71 budget for the Carmel Unified School District will be approved at next Wednesday night's meeting of the school board at 7:30 p.m. in Brey Hall, Carmel High School.

At its last meeting, the board gave first approval to a tentative budget of $4,079,363, which is about $200,000 higher than the '69-'70 budget.

However, the administration said it would hold to the current tax rate of $2.72.

According to the assessment rolls released this week, this should pose no problem at all. The assessed value of property within the Carmel school district was set at $100,857,268, an increase of $8,348,428, or almost 10 percent over the previous year. The school district had based its new budget on an anticipated seven percent increase in assessments.

Included in the proposed budget is a six percent cost of living increase for all certified and classified personnel at an estimated cost of $166,000.

GERRY REEVES (l.), of Carmel, receives a certificate of appreciation from Carmel stockbroker Charles Ziert, board chairman of the Central Mission Trails Heart Assn., for her heading the committee which planned the association's annual dinner held recently at the La Playa Hotel. More than 250 members and friends of the heart association attended the event, largest in its history. Dr. Norman Shumway of Stanford University was speaker.

His career also includes administrative positions which will be of assistance to retailers and others in developing their advertising and promotion plans.

Minnick served as a pilot and operations officer during World War II. He has a master's degree in history. He also enjoys tennis, sailing and drama, and hopes to take advantage of the abundant opportunities to enoy these interests in our community.

M.P.V.S. to give proceeds of Garden Tour

Members of Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services will entertain the residents of Carmel and Pebble Beach who generously offered their homes and gardens for the recent Garden Tour, at a luncheon following their regular meeting Friday at Del Monte Lodge.

The business meeting will convene at 11 a.m.

Representatives of the Symphony Guild and the Visiting Nurse Association, the groups which are benefitting from the Tour, will attend and receive their checks from Mrs. Howard Healey, tour chairman.

City employees get 5½% salary raise for '70-'71

The 1970-71 salary schedule for city employees was released this week by Ralph Cowen, Assistant City Administrator. The new salaries average about 5½ per cent above last year's, but some employees captured raises as high as 22 per cent.

Salaries for the Police Department are up 14 per cent over last year, and those for the Public Works Department are up 11 per cent.

The new salary schedule totals over $500,000 for the fiscal year which began July 1. This figure does not include part-time or over-time remuneration, which last year added another $53,000 to the salary schedule of $480,000 for 1969-70.

The Pine Cone will have further details after the complete 1970-71 budget is presented to the City Council.

Residents fight back:

City planners to reconsider approval of zoning variance

The Carmel Planning Commission will meet next Wednesday to reconsider its approval to the County Planning Commission of a zoning variance application in Hatton Fields.

The Commission had recommended the rezoning of a 4-acre site in order to reduce the minimum area per homesite from 20,000 square feet to 10,000.

Since that time, an overwhelming majority of Hatton Fields' residents have expressed their opposition to the rezoning, and at the last Planning Commission meeting on June 24 a number of interested parties spoke to the commissioners and asked them to reconsider their findings.

Among those present at the meeting was Admiral C. W. Fisher, president of the Carmel Citizens' Committee; Earl Moser, and William Davis. Davis appeared with a map of the Hatton Fields area which showed nearly unanimous local opposition to the rezoning.

The Commission decided to reconsider its previous position and will meet on the 4-acre site the afternoon of the 15th. The final decision will come later that day during their regular meeting. The County Board of Supervisors will meet on July 28 for the final decision about the rezoning.

Following is the text of a letter written to the Carmel Planning Commission by residents of Hatton Fields, expressing their position:

The Carmel City Planning Commission
Carmel, California

Gentlemen:

The undersigned would like to express what we know is the general feeling in Hatton Fields, and that is a feeling of respect and gratitude toward the Carmel Planning Commission that they should at this late date officially review a decision already made. This action at the very least displays a generous and open-minded spirit, a willingness to look again, which is too rare a thing in our public bodies.

When the Floyd Carter application to rezone came before the County Planning Commission last month we were surprised and saddened to discover that your body had expressed approval of this change. We were dismayed when we saw how effectively this approval was used against us. We see now and understand how your approval came about. Our own county officials, as they have done so often in the past, put this request upon you with such short notice that a thorough and proper evaluation was well-nigh impossible. We were unaware that you were considering the matter, and consequently the applicant was able to present his case before you unopposed. We feel strongly that this is an unsatisfactory situation, and you have intimated yourselves that you feel so also.

Inasmuch as we had no opportunity to present our case then, let us summarize it in a brief paragraph: The present zoning of 20,000 sq. ft. minimum was placed on the area after due consideration, recognizing the established character of the area as a whole. Mr. Carter's parcel is a part of this area. It is inextricably bound to it by many factors, and what is proper for the area as a whole is proper for Mr. Carter's parcel. The smaller lots nearby, when carefully considered, are not valid precedents or justifications for breaking down the present zoning—nor do the owners of most of these lots wish them to be used as such. Many residents here, particularly those who have purchased since 1966, have made their investments trusting that the present zoning would be protected and maintained. The present zoning is unfortunate for Mr. Carter, but good for the neighborhood as a whole—and that is the whole purpose of zoning laws. The petitions opposing Mr. Carter now contain more than 150 signatures of persons living in this immediate affected area; the opposition is virtually unanimous.

Again, we are deeply gratified that you have consented to take this second look. This matter comes before the Supervisors July 28, and is of extreme importance to the homeowners in the affected area, and we would hope that if a re-evaluation results in a modification of your stand your feelings could be expressed in time to be of help to us. There is no question but that the aim of the Carmel City Planning Commission is identical with our own; to retain what is good and beautiful in the Carmel area, and to help guide future development along lines that are best for all of us. In accomplishing this aim we would endeavor in the future, on similar occasions, to keep the lines of communication open, and to make our feelings more promptly known to you.

Respectfully yours, expressing the sentiments of the overwhelming majority of our neighbors in Hatton Fields

Bach Festival banners fly at Sunset

The Carmel Bach Festival's July programs, under the musical direction of Sandor Salgo, are a week away, but at the Sunset Cultural Center the days and nights are filled with music and excitement.

The Festival banners, an innovation this year, are flying from the lamp standards in front of the auditorium, gay Festival posters have been distributed, enthusiastic participants in the Festival Orchestra, Chorale, Chorus and many of the outstanding soloists wave to each other and local friends on the streets and the Festival office and box office in room 3 of Sunset Center is the scene of constant activity.

The first four programs on July 17, 18, 19 and 20 are completely sold out and daily orders and purchases indicate a complete sell out for all concerts. Morning and afternoon recitals also promise to be well attended as they afford an opportunity to hear beautifully chosen programs performed by the season's soloists in the Parish Hall of All Saints' Episcopal Church and the Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Monterey.

There are still tickets available for the concerts on the 21st through the 26th and they, as well as recital tickets, may be purchased at the Festival box office from 10-12 and 1-4 daily.

Remember When?

50 YEARS AGO

From the Pine Cone of July 8, 1920:

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. and family, who are on a motor trip through California, were guests at the Highlands Inn last Sunday.

25 YEARS AGO

From the Pine Cone of July 13, 1945:

As soon as the parking limit two hour signs go up on Dolores Street between Ocean and Sixth, probably Monday, Chief of Police Roy Fraties will start enforcing the new regulation, which was passed by the council at its meeting last.

10 YEARS AGO

From the Pine Cone of July 7, 1960:

Carmel Unified School District trustees took further action this week in the case of Martin Marcus, Sunset School science teacher, who allegedly refused under oath to answer questions put to him at subcommittee hearing of the House Un-American Activities Committee in San Francisco on May 12.

State backs sewer bonds

In a letter dated July 2, Kerry W. Mulligan, chairman of the State Water Resources Control Board, stated that the State Board "fully supports" the upcoming $2.4 million bond issue for improvement of the water treatment plant for the Carmel Sanitary District.

In addition, Mulligan informed the Carmel Committee to Control Water Pollution Now that "last week the State Water Resources Control Board established a priority list for projects that may be eligible for federal grants during the coming fiscal year. The facilities proposed by the Carmel Sanitary District are included on the list but will require further evaluation to assure that funds invested will provide the most effective long-term pollution control for the Carmel-Monterey Bay area."

The bond issue comes up August 4 and is supported by CCCWPN, headed by Adm. C. W. Fisher and Earl Moser. The money raised would convert the current, 30-year primary treatment plant to a more efficient primary and secondary treatment plant.

The possibility of state or federal aid to the project is of great importance, both to the citizens of the Sanitary District as a money saving issue and to conservationists as necessary for the encouragement of anti-pollution measures.

In response to a telegram sent by Fisher and Moser, Mulligan said: "We are responsible for assuring that the facilities built can be coordinated with future developments in the Carmel Valley, and we are convinced that this can be done. The urgent need to upgrade waste treatment being provided by the 30-year old existing plant is evident to all. We know that the citizens of the Carmel area share our concern and will respond favorably at the election."

Sentencing July 14 in hit-run case

Mrs. Dorothy Luce of Carmel Valley, who was charged last month with felony hit-and-run driving involving the death of a 20-year-old soldier on Route 1, will be sentenced July 14 in Superior Court.

Mrs. Luce originally pleaded not guilty to the charge and waived her right to a preliminary hearing. However, she changed her plea to "nolo contendre" at her arraignment on the condition that the case be treated as a misdemeanor.

CBA will offer plans to city to solve Carmel's parking problem

A special committee of the Carmel Business Association has developed a "workable plan" to alleviate Carmel's knotty parking problems. They will meet "within a week" to map plans to present their findings to the City Council.

The committee, headed by Tom May and including James Peter Cost and Bill Jennings, will call for progressively increasing fines for repeated parking violations. One suggestion put forth was $2 for the first offense, $5 for the second and $10 for each subsequent violation in a year's period.

The committee has estimated that the lack of convenient parking space is costing the business community nearly $10 million per year in lost revenue.

May said that one of the principle causes of the shortage is the "misuse of core area spaces by business merchants and employees." The "core" area encompasses the business district where one-and-two hour parking limits are posted on the streets.

The committee found that approximately 1,000 cars are brought into Carmel each day by businessmen and employees, many of which are parked in front of their places of business. In fact, May said that "there are some individuals who now pay up to $200 per month in overtime parking violations as a regular business expense and will continue to do so, unless some method can be found to discourage them using the valuable space."

In addition to the fine increase, the committee is considering the use of "moral suasion persistently applied to violators among the business people and official sanction of such suasion by the CBA." Such "suasion" would amount to informal pressure and "arm-twisting" applied to repeating offenders.

Also noted by the committee are a number of long-term options to stem the growing problem. These include:

a. Peripheral off-street parking lots

b. Underground parking garages

c. Zoning changes to limit size and bulk of new structures so as to minimize floor space.

d. Zoning changes to require extra off-street parking spaces for new structures.

e. A viable parking policy having common agreement between the city and business community.

f. Public transport, such as trams.

Such major innovations would require additional financing, and May's committee is also working out possible methods of underwriting future parking improvements.

The committee's final recommendations will be submitted to the City Council for consideration in August or September.

'First 25 years are the hardest'

Wisharts celebrate golden anniversary

"Honestly, I don't know where the time's gone!" smiled Mrs. George A. Wishart in telling of the celebration recently of hers and Mr. Wishart's fiftieth wedding anniversary. "Anyway, the first 25 years are the hardest!"

The couple's six children honored their parents with a party at La Playa Hotel, the site chosen by the senior Wisharts because it was already a landmark when they settled in Carmel in 1930. Mr. and Mrs. Wishart became well known on the Peninsula in later years in the bakery business from which they retired in 1959.

The gold and white tiered cake was decorated by the Wisharts' son Bill. Crysanthemums in golden tones ornamented the tables. In keeping with the theme, Mrs. Wishart wore a champagne colored silk dress with gold beading at the neckline and on the matching jacket.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Layton (Charlotte Wishart) of Monterey brought their daughter Charlene who came from Seattle for the event, and their son George, of Monterey. Another son, Fred, was unable to come from Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Noel Jones (Doris Wishart) of Saratoga were joined for the occasion by their sons, Noel, a student at Gonzaga University, Seattle; Charles, presently at Fort Ord; and Ross and his wife Joanne, of Saratoga.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Wishart and their son Bob came from Arcadia. Their daughter Marsha (Mrs. David Olender), her husband and daughter, were unable to attend, as Lt. Olender is stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Hill (Emma Ann Wishart) attended with daughter Peggy and son Jeff. The Hills are presently living in Belvedere following their recent return from Hyeerabad, India. Their elder daughter Joanne us due back soon from Stuttgart, Germany, where she attended Shiller College.

From Belmont came daughter Monie Wishart bringing long-time family friend Patricia McFarren.

Son Bill and his wife Jane made the trip from Tahoe City. Mr. Wishart's sister Jessie Ellen Wishart, having returned the day before from an Alaskan cruise, arrived from San Francisco. Also at the celebration were Mr. Wishart's sister-in-law Mrs. James Wishart of Seal Beach, and old family friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herb Woodard of Arcadia.

MRS. CHAMBERLIN IN ST. LOUIS NOW

Mrs. Lee Chamberlin of Carmel, executive director of Monterey Bay Girl Scout Council, is representing the Soroptimist Club of Monterey Peninsula at the biennial convention of the Soroptimist Federation of the Americas, Inc. in St. Louis, Mo., July 5-10. The meeting, at the Chase-Park Plaza Hotel attracted more than 800 women business executives from all parts of the Western Hemisphere and several Asian nations.

PARTY PLANS . . .

by Phyllis Jervey

How fortunate for Carmel that Colonel and Mrs. Joseph R. Reeves decided to retire here. A misnomer for both of this busiest of couples, since retire to them means "go where the action is."

Colonel Reeves is Project Manager for Advanced Planning and Analysis at Fort Ord and his remarkable wife, Geraldine, has so many worthwhile activities for "whiling the hours away" that it is impossible to adequately describe them all.

Briefly, "Gerry" is a member of the Board of the Tri-County Mission Trails Heart Association; Vice President of the Womens Society for Christian Service of Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer; Art Display Coordinator of the Monterey Institute of Speech and Hearing; Carmel chairman for the Old Monterey Bicentennial plus the very capable chairman of the Beethoven Festival. The latter important Peninsula event is on Saturday, October 17 at the Carmel Mission with Maestro Haymo Tauber conducting the magnificent "Missa Solemnis."

Everything that Gerry attempts she does with thoroughness and joy. One of her greatest gifts is to bring out the utmost in her committee members and to expect them to be as enthusiastic as she is. We didn't say that Gerry demands. Although firm, as true leaders must be, Gerry is perceptive and knows her co-workers will really TRY. Her motto is "Let's make it the best anyone has ever done!"

That's why we sincerely believe with her that the Carmel Mission Beethoven Festival will attract an audience of at least 5,000 awed listeners.

As for Gerry's past accomplishments, to name only a few: while stationed with Colonel Reeves in Tokyo she studied with Mekio Kasuya and was awarded a master's degree in Modern Japanese Floral Art. Her book "Beauty on a Budget", published while on duty in Naples, Italy was used by military ladies in the NATO Command for 6 overseas countries, plus our own.

Also when in Japan, Gerry completed a special course in the Benedictine Sisters Chinese Cooking School Established by a pair of refugee nuns seeking sanctuary after years of confinement in China by the Reds, these two intrepid sisters taught Gerry how to entertain in Chinese. Their book "The Art of Chinese Cooking" is still being successfully printed by Charles E. Tuttle of Tokyo for the benefit of homeless Japanese children.

How does Gerry find time to entertain with such minute attention to detail? A perfectionist in advanced planning and preparation, is your reporter's observation. Their Carmel home is replete with authentic rare old Chinese porcelain collected by Colonel Reeves' father who was U.S. military attache in Peking serving there during the Boxer Rebellion. Due to lack of space, Party Plans must curtail details of the Reeves' exquisitely appointed dining room. We had a choice of 12 unusual Chinese recipes which Gerry uses with her own individual touch.

Gerry explains that the Chinese always serve 8-10 courses taking a small amount of each with chopsticks. Hot cloths in baskets are passed instead of finger bowls for hand washing...both before and after the meal. One of her diversified menus is: During cocktail hour serve:

Dollar Shrimp

One lb. shrimp, shelled, chopped fine; 10 water chestnuts also chopped fine; 2 T. cornstarch; 1 t. dry sherry or white wine; ½ t. salt; 1 egg, beaten; 3 cups peanut oil; a little grated onion, garlic and ginger.

Mix shrimp and chestnuts, add cornstarch, wine, salt, egg. Form into balls. Heat skillet, add oil and quickly fry balls until golden brown. To make 30 dollar-size shrimp balls, drop by tablespoonfuls. Have soy sauce for dipping with bamboo picks. Serve hot.

Beef with Peppers

One lb. top round beef cut into strips; 1½ T. peanut oil; 1 clove garlic, crushed; 1 t. salt; ½ t. fresh ginger, minced; pepper to taste; 1 sweet green and red Bell pepper, each; 1 can consomme.

Heat oil, add oil and garlic. Remove latter when brown. Add beef to oil; saute briefly. Add consomme, season extremely lightly. Add 2 T. cornstarch; 1 T. soy sauce; 2 T. water mixed together. Cook until sauce thickens; add peppers sliced diagonally with chopped ginger. Do not overcook. Serve on steaming rice. Makes 6 servings.

Sauteed Asparagus

Twenty canned or fresh asparagus, saving juice; ¼ cup chicken broth and asparagus juice, each; 1 T. sherry; 2 T. soy sauce; 1 T. cornstarch; 2 T. peanut oil.

Heat pan, add oil, broth, juices, wine, soy, cornstarch. Stir constantly until it boils; add asparagus, cook until hot. Fresh asparagus should be previously but briefly cooked. Serve hot. Jasmine tea, exotic fruits such as lichee and persimmons,

Nelms Finch wins Army award

THE DECORATION FOR MERITORIOUS CIVILIAN SERVICE is presented to Nelms F. Finch (center) by Brigadier General Glen C. Long (left), Ft. Ord's deputy commanding general. Mrs. Finch and C.H. Woodbury, chief of Civilian Personnel at Ft. Ord, attend the award ceremony.

The Decoration for Meritorious Civilian Service has been awarded by the Army to Nelms F. Finch of Rio Road, Carmel, who is chief of technical services in the Civilian Personnel Office at Fort Ord.

Finch, a member and a founder of the Salinas Valley Employ-the-Handicapped Committee, was honored for his outstanding contributions to the Ft. Ord placement-of-the-handicapped program.

"The unusual courage displayed by Mr. Finch in overcoming his own handicap," the citation read, "his personal attitude, efficiency and helpfulness have served as a constant source of inspiration to others and have been a positive influence in creating opportunities for handicapped persons in Federal service and in the local communities."

In 1969, Mr. Finch was selected as Ft. Ord's nominee as the outstanding Handicapped Federal Employee of the Year. Through consideration of all nominees at higher headquarters, he became successively the Sixth U.S. Army nominee and the Headquarters Continental Army nominee. At Department of the Army level, he was runner-up to the employee selected as the Department of the Army award winner.

The Decoration for Meritorious Civilian Service certificate and the medal were presented to Mr. Finch by Brigadier General Glen C. Long, Ft. Ord's deputy commanding general, in a ceremony at Ft. Ord.

WHY COUNCILMEN AS COMMISSIONERS

Have you wondered why a man you elected here as a city councilman soon becomes known as fire commissioner? Or police commissioner? Or street commissioner?

And have you wondered what these designations mean to the councilman concerned, to the city, and to you as a voter and taxpayer?

The answers can be important for they often do have significant pocketbook implications. Once you know the answers, and once you understand their implications, you may want to take a hand in eliminating these commissionerships.

Immediately after each city election, the City Council meets to "organize" itself. Basically this means naming one of its members as mayor, and another as vice mayor. In some small cities of what is called the "general law" type (which Carmel is), the mayor, once he is sworn-in, not only names standing committees, but also names each councilman as a "commissioner" of some department. And that's why a particular councilman soon begins to be called police commissioner, fire commissioner, or something else.

Since Carmel city councilmen are unpaid (though they could vote themselves modest pay if they wished), they continue to be as unpaid following their designation as commissioners as they had been before. Also, the added commissionerships given them no added administrative authority, as I found out very soon after being elected to my first term as a city councilman here, twelve years ago.

One morning the assistant fire chief (who was a volunteer and not a paid staff member), phoned to say a fire seemed to be burning out of control at Pebble Beach and that Carmel had been called for help. He said he didn't know what else to do except to call me since I had just been designated fire commissioner, and since the mayor was out of town and the regular fire chief was on vacation. Should he call volunteer fireman and send a city fire engine to Pebble Beach, even though it was outside the city limits?

Since there obviously wasn't any time to waste, I told the assistant fire chief to go ahead. As soon as word of this reached City Hall, Iwas told that I had no authority to send any fire engine even an inch outside the firehouse, and that the assistant fire chief, while acting as chief, should have known that he had the needed authority himself. Except for the chief, or the acting chief, only a majority of the City Council could order a fire engine to go anywhere, and to make things right the City Council retroactively authorized my unintended illegal act, at its next meeting.

This incident simply emphasizes the point that a councilman as a fire commissioner, or as any other departmental commissioner, has no specific command function in any Carmel city department. His relationship is usually described as a "liaison" function. He is simply the City Council's specific contact with a certain dity department.

But that isn't quite all. And that's why the nominal commissionership of a city councilman can be costly to the city, and thus to you as a taxpayer.

When a councilman starts to think of himself primarily as a police or fire or street commissioner, even though he has no supervisory authority--and councilman have frequently come to think of themselves in such terms-- he begins to act as if his main function were to try to get as much machinery and as much manpower as possible for the particular city department involved.

At the same time he is likely to start to neglect to consider himself as being, first of all, the elected representative of all Carmel's voters and taxpayers. And that is a point of view which can lead to excessive expenditures in every city department during the budget sessions which the City Council holds every summer, as it is doing now.

All five city councilmen should weigh and measure every budget item, no matter which city department proposes it, as the elected representatives of all the people of Carmel, and not merely as advocates for the various city departments which are necessarily in competition with each other for funds.

It is for this reason that I believe the Carmel City Council should abolish the nominal cimmissionerships. Their continued existence serves no necessary purpose today in Carmel, and their abolition could lead to budget economies.

Four Carmel youths finish music course

Carmel music students Evelyn Mizuno, violin, Sallie Pastula, violin, Mindy Rayne, viola and Peri Shefik, flute, have been awarded Certificates of Completion by the Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula, marking their participation in Summer Music Day Camp, 1970.

The certificates cite two weeks of special experiences in music, both group and individual learning, made possible for 27 Peninsula area students because of a generous grant from the Monterey Jazz Festival.

Under the direction of Mr. Fred Schlichting, Director of Music for Clover Park Schools, Washington, the student particpants have spent six days in ensemble and orchestral reading and playing and in class discussions of theory, transposition, and other similar topics in music education.

Mrs. Robert W. Priestley, Jr., of Carmel, is the chairman of the Music Committee of the Lyceum and responsible for arrangements for this program. Sessions have been held at All Saints' Episcopal Church.

the business scene in Carmel

By JAMES PETER COST
President, Carmel Business Assn.

Several columns ago I touched lightly on a subject I would like now to pursue in greater depth. It is important to point out here that these are my own opinions and judgments based on my own observations and research.

In brief, my point was: a great many businesses in Carmel are run successfully by people who were not trained in business or in sales. By the term "trained" I do not mean only formal training as in college or business school. I also included previous experience of any kind in related areas. I commented that I thought 40 per cent of the businesses in Carmel were run by people without previous business experience.

It is interesting to speculate about this phenomenon. I have discussed this with several people in town in whom I have great faith and upon whose opinions and information I rely heavily. I was just a little surprised to learn that I was not the only or even the first person to become aware of the circumstance. In fact, so common and recognizable is it, it is referred to as the Carmel phenomenon." I'm sure many towns or places have the same situation. It has helped me immensely to try to pin the thing down. How can so many people who seemingly have so little experience as shopkeepers be so successful in running businesses?

In its crudest form, it is stated as : "You can sell anything in Carmel." Of course, the statement is a myth (one of which I will deal with at another time) but it does reflect a condition that actually exists. A number of factors undoubtedly are responsible for the existence of the phenomenon. In this week's column, I will limit my remarks to the amateur businessman himself. Next week or later, I would like to go into detail on the catalytic agents, the town visitor, residents and consumers and the part they play in the production of the phenomenon.

It has been my observation that the businessman himself is no insignificant force in making his business successful. While I firmly believe sound business practices combined with the things I will list below would produce greater success, there is little doubt that the novice businessman in spite of his limited shopkeeping experience is of higher quality than would be found under similar circumstances in other towns. That is to say, when a man with the qualities necessary to succeed in life gets ready to retire or gets sick of the "rat race," he thinks in terms of areas like the Monterey Peninsula. Hence, the Monterey Peninsula attracts the man who is more successful at things he undertakes than a less desirable area.

Certainly, the fact that a man arrives eventually on the Peninsula rather than the downtown area of any metropolis is evidence of his ability to provide successful solutions to problems in a variety of non-business facets of his life. For example, if he had no ability to solve problems he would, as a pin ball, eventually drift to the least desirable spot around or to a place commensurate with his ability to exist. So just the fact that he arrives here is testimony to his ability.

The Carmel amateur businessman has provided himself a fairly desirable general location to try his hand at business, thereby improving his chances of success right from the start.

Most of them I know fit a pattern. More often than not they have emerged from a successful career in other fields. Usually they are well organized and while they are not at the outset familiar with advertising, budgeting, buying and other business practices that will make them more competitive later on, they are used to getting things done, and right now. They don't want to waste time. They may grind a gear or two, but they won't settle for less than high.

Money probably does not present a problem. They have been working, saving and investing for many years. Their children are grown or almost. Their cars and refrigerators have long since been paid for. Their expenses are at the lowest they have been in their lives and in general they are fully able to finance their ventures into the business world. If they are unable to completely finance their ventures, they know how to get the financing and already have the contacts.

One of their greatest single assets is they probably come from industry or advertising or teaching, etc. and are service oriented rather than sales oriented. If they do come from selling, they probably worked for large firms and dealt with representatives from large firms rather than directly with the consumer. In many cases they bring to Carmel a large number of their own followers.

Basically they want to serve rather than sell. Being new at shopkeeping they have not yet developed the "shop attitude" or the irritability or the indifference so frequently associated with salespeople in large city organizations. They are usually honest to a fault expecting the best from everyone and are sometimes easy prey to shoplifters, bad check passers, poor credit risks and unscrupulous wholesalers. They learn fast, do not usually make the same mistakes twice and profit immediately by their own errors.

Most of these amateur businessmen do not remain amateurs long. The day they set aside a certain percentage of their budgets for advertising, businessman's groups, promotion, improvements, expansion, etc., is the day they lose their amateur standing. When they do lose their amateur standing, don't get in their way, because from that point on they mean business—professional business!

These men, I believe, make up a considerable part of the Carmel business force. They are good men. They are good for Carmel and good for themselves and they contribute much to the "Carmel Phenomenon" and that is good for all of us, consumers and businessmen.

Do you want to believe in God?

You can. Not just because of what someone says about God. But because of what you yourself can learn and prove about divine Love.

Like the woman who was instantly freed by an assailant one night – when she turned to God in prayer. Or the entertainer whose back was healed through prayer after he was told he couldn't walk without surgery.

These individuals found that divine Love meets even the most challenging human needs . . . that powerful spiritual laws are available for anyone to use.

You can learn more of these laws by reading this week's Bible Lesson.

WIND BLOWN TRIP

Superintendent of Public Works Bill Askew and his wife Mary plan a three-week July vacation mainly "where the wind blows us." The first week will be spent in Grants Pass, Oregon, and after that plans are "flexible." But since Bill, daughter Lynn and son Bill III are accomplished riders, they'll definitely be back in time for the Salinas rodeo.

RIVAL BOOSTER

Harriet Meyer, executive secretary of the Carmel Business Association, who walks around town handing out maps and answering puzzled tourists' questions, recently found she had an "amateur" competitor, Warren Crabtree.

As a self-appointed chamber of commerce, Mr. Crabtree cuts maps from a magazine and carries them with him as giveaways. Incidentally, his wife, a weaver and member of the Craft Guild who exhibits in Artists in Action at Sunset Center, weaves, designs and makes most of her husband's interesting wardrobe.

PEOPLE vs. FREMIER

That's what the check stub said. And what Roger Fremier, the Pine Cone's frenetic photographer said was, "I can't believe it!" It was a check for two dollars for "Duplicate Payment" in "Case No. 44106" from the Municipal Court, Monterey-Carmel Judicial District. Rog is a heavy supporter of the city budget—four or five parking tickets a month. Perhaps he just mails two dollars every Tuesday—and June had five Tuesdays. "Anyway, it probably cost more than two dollars for the court to research the error and process the check," he opined.

LONGEST SERVICE

After 23 years, the longest service of any individual with the Carmel Police department, Verdie J. Herdine retired last week for health reasons. He began police work here June 11, 1947. His immediate retirement plans include a trip with his family to the Midwest.

TALCOTT AT HI 12

Burt L. Talcott, congressman from the 12th District, was the speaker at Monday's High Twelve meeting (also Ladies' Day) when members entertained their wives at luncheon at La Playa Hotel. Mr. Talcott "told it like it is in the 91st Congress."

Program chairman Webster Downer announced other July Monday speakers as Gene Englund of the Monterey Institute for Speech and Hearing, July 13; Edward G. Currall, senior probation officer for Monterey County, July 20; and member Richard A. Bovard, July 27, telling of his experiences in Saudi Arabia.

Thompson, actively associated with Jehovah's Witnesses for 19 years, will speak at the Saturday evening assemblage, his subject, "Exert Yourselves Vigorously—Do Not 'Beg Off'."

He and his wife Beverly who works with him will return to their circuit assignment, covering 16 congregations, on Aug. 6.

Maurice has spent most of his life in Carmel, and attended Sunset School in the original Mission street building. He plans to spend a good deal of time at the Grimshaw's "home away from home" in White Rock.

MOST QUESTIONS

The letter with the most questions from a prospective visitor that ever reached the Carmel Business Association is this one from a California man, courtesy of CBA secretary Harriet Meyer:

"Do you have any materials on history of the town, particularly interesting things to see, facts of historical or immediate interest? Do you have a map of some kind that shows where all the little shops are and what their specialties are? Do you have a list of the shops that tells something of interest about the proprietors, their backgrounds, specialties, training, age, etc.? Perhaps there are some unique art forms that have developed? Do you have a list of the various restaurants and coffee shops that tells something of the decor of the place, its particular specialty foods, and the prices—high to low? Do you have moving picture theaters, bowling alley, and such for night time entertainment? Or what do you suggest for nighttime entertainment? How is the water at the beach in August? Is it cold, too cold for swimming? Are there any dangerous rip tides to beware of, etc.?"

REAL CLAMBAKE

An old-fashioned down east clambake, staged as a Fourth of July celebration for 50-odd members of the cast and crew of the Community Theater and their friends on Carmel beach, promises to become a happy tradition.

Theater director Michael Keller originated the idea while cast member Drew Devendorf was the prime mover.

It was the real thing, with a deep sand pit dug at the 13th street cove at 7 in the morning, lined with stones, fires kept burning for hours to heat the rocks. Then in went foil-wrapped packets of food in layers, covered with seaweed, then a tarpaulin and sand over all.

Water was dripped over the food-loaded pit all the rest of the day to steam the goodies. These came out of their cooking nest in "courses"—cherrystone clams, a whole crab apiece, corn on the cob and finally Cornish game hens.

And the drippy fog didn't dampen the spirits of any guest.

Jeannette Rankin proposes radical electoral reforms

THE FIRST WOMAN ELECTED TO CONGRESS, Jeanette Rankin has lost none of the spark and drive that marked her role as a suffragette and peace advocate more than 50 years ago. She is living at the Carmel Valley Manor this summer while recouperating from a broken hip. She's all for the current women's liberation drive, but wishes its leaders would spend a little more time on anti-war activities.

Calendars, like computers, can be wrong.

According to the rigid system by which we calculate time, Jeannette Rankin celebrated her 90th birthday in Carmel Valley on June 11. She is, one would say euphamistically, a "senior citizen."

But according to every other individual measurement – breadth of vision and strength of idealism, depth of involvement and zest for change, Jeannette Rankin is younger by far than most of the student revolutionaries in our midst.

Whearas many of them has already grown weary from battling "the war" or "the system," she is plunging full tilt into the future, working tirelessly for revolutionary election reforms, minority rights and peace.

In conversation her thoughts focus on the intricacies of the present and the prospects for the future. Her rare references to the past are never more than brief historical footnotes to a contemporary problem.

But on almost any issue you can name, she was there first.

Protest against the military and war? As a member of Congress from Montana she voted against President Woodrow Wilson's declaration of war in 1918. And 23 years later she cast the only vote against America's entry into World War II. In both cases, her vote cost her her seat in the House.

Women's liberation? She was the first woman elected to Congress (1916). As one of the original suffragettes, she served as field secretary of the National American Women's Suffrage Association. In those days, the battle for women's rights involved hazards far more perilous than shedding a bra.

Constructive work for peace? In the era between the world wars she lobbied for the National Council for the Prevention of War, whose most significant legislative achievement was passage of the arms embargo.

Social awareness and action? She was a student at the School of Philanthropy in New York in 1908-09 and became a social worker. Her frustration with the conditions she found led her into the suffrage movement, and still underscores her intesest in election reform today.

"I'm very, very much interested in the next Congressional election, not this year but in 1972," she said last week. "That will be the election that will be affected by the current census. California may have gained a seat or two (in the House of Representatives) and other states may be cut back. Redistricting will be a big issue in many states, and this is what I'm concerned about."

The she explained the first of two intriguing ideas for election reform.

AN UNUSUAL PROPOSAL

"Take California now," she continued. "It has 38 Congressional districts, which means 38 gerrymandered districts.

"I think if you had fewer but larger districts, with several Congressmen representing the same district, you'd get a much more accurate and open expression of popular opinion.

"Suppose, after the new census, California will have 40 Congressional seats. Divide that into eight districts, with five men to be elected from a district. Now five ideas could be represented. The voter would have five times as much chance of having at least one man who represented him on something."

This plan would also have potential advantage for a Congressman, who would be able to represent at least part of his diverse constituency without trying to be all things to all people.

"No one Congressman could ever represent me on international affairs and education and farming and minority rights. In fact, not even one woman would be able to do that," she added with a wry smile.

While the logic of her argument is inescapable, she is fully aware of the political odds against it. State legislatures set the boundaries for Congressional districts, and whichever party controls the state legislature will inevitably try to tailor districts to its own advantage. Furthermore, Congressmen from "safe" districts will certainly rebel at the idea of being tossed into a larger arena where their future might be in jeapordy.

A few years ago, she said, she convinced Georgia's Senator Richard Russell of the fundamental democratic logic of her proposal, and later a bill to divide Georgia into two large Congressional districts with five representatives each was introduced in the Georgia legislature. It didn't succeed, but she considers it a noble first attempt.

She spoke in a firm, strong voice, her hands moving restlessly from the arms of her chair to her lap to a hospital bed table in front of her. She is, temporarily, staying in the medical center at Carmel Valley Manor, but the walker near her chair is the only mute evidence to the fact she broke her hip in a fall two months ago.

Her comfortable room doesn't begin to contain her interests and vitality, but it does reflect them. Two books by Missouri Congressman Richard Bolling were at her bedside, flanked by papers, news magazines and a phone that rang with someone asking questions about Congressional reform.

In front of her were two books she had just received – "Where Do We Go From Here?" by Martin Luther King, and "The War of the Copper Kings". (She was, after all, raised in Montana, where copper counts.) Peeking out from a mound of letters and notes was a large-print edition of the New York Times, her only evident concession to the passage of time.

ANOTHER RADICAL IDEA

Sorting through her makeshift "file," she pulled out a printed statement giving her views on another cause she espouses -- a direct presidential preferential election.

Basically, this consists of abolishing the primary and final election process involving candidates from two political parties. In its place, she envisions one national election with several presidential candidates, some perhaps endorsed by parties and some running independently. A voter would be able to vote for his first, second, third, fourth and fifth choices for President.

If no candidate recieved a majority on the first choice ballot, the second choices would be tallied, and so forth until a winner was declared.

"It is the lack of choice in presidential politics which is alienating the young and driving large segments of the voting population into the streets to express themselves," her statement reads. "We have proven that public opinion can drive a President out of office, but we cannot elect a president of our choice. What is needed to give all individuals and minorities a chance to express an opinion in secret ballot is a direct preferential vote for president ...

"I speak for the direct preferential method because I believe strongly in the democratic processes which place sovereign power with the people. This is an issue which has concerned me since suffragette days in Montana. Americans have always believed that just governments rest on the consent of the governed.

"Legally, we now have universal suffrage among adults in this country. But the vote is not as valuable as it should be so long as the voter must choose between candidates who have been picked for him and who may or may not express his interests and ideals ...

"The preferential vote is more than a means of casting a vote for president. It is a means of expressing an opinion. It is the only method of voting which also provides an accurate and in-depth assessment of public opinion. This is a major asset in a pluralistic society where the problem of consensus in government grows more acute every day."

COMPUTER CAN HELP

This idea evolved during her early suffrage days, but at that time there was not any practical way to count such a preferential ballot.

But now, in an age of computers, that is no longer an insurmountable problem. She suggests that the optical character recognition machines used in the Social Security Administration could be used right now to count such a vote.

"It is feasable from both the standpoints of time and money," she explained, "because it would eliminate both the primary and the run-off".

To limit the number of candidates, she would require either a petition signed by a certain number of voters, or the posting of a substantial bond which the candidate would forfeit if he failed to receive a certain percentage of the vote, but would be returned to him for his campaign expenses if he polls more than the required percentage.

If, at first reading, this sounds slightly cumbersome, one has only to think about the 50 different primary election codes in effect today, coupled with diverse and not particularly democratic procedures of the two political parties, to realize how basically clear-cut and direct a preferential election would be.

She has been lobbying Congressmen to support this proposal – it would take a Constitutional amendment for it to become law – for two reasons: it would give more weight to an individual vote, and it seems to her the best way to elect a "peace president."

"I think if people can cast a really secret vote, where they don't have to vote by party labels, they will always vote against war," she said.

"And everything I work for and do is consistent with this idea -- peace.

"I can't remember when I wasn't against war. It's just a very reasonable thing. You can't settle things between individuals with violence ... and a moral law that has been stated correctly is just as immutable as any other law. We were always taught not to kill or steal or lie. Someday we'll learn that it's just as vicious to hate ..."

PRAISES YOUTH

She thinks today's youthful war protestors are doing "a splendid job. Never before has a generation in America faced the possibility that their life is limited. It's very hard for us to realize what an emotional thing it is to be faced with death, especially when you're young.

"And then there's that frightful lottery system for the draft, that says that so many young men born on a certain date will die ...

"You know," she mused, " with modern science fewer and fewer people have to face the possibility of an early death today, except for war."

Two years ago she supported Eugene McCarthy as a peace candidate, and spoke on his behalf in Monterey. But it's not the individual who interests her as much as the cause, and the opportunity to open up channels for the expression of public opinion.

"I think the establishment can be changed," she said. "We have already proved we can get a president out of office, and we have turned another one around on the war.

"But so far we haven't been able to get a president of popular choice into office. And we won't until we change our laws."

Miss Rankin is pressing her quest for election reform by letter and telephone to key members of Congress, including Rep. John Moss of Sacramento, who is sponsoring one preferential vote measure. She also has appeared at anti-war rallies.

A t the moment, however, she is mostly impatient to be mobile and self-sufficient again. She plans to return to her home in Watkinsville, Ga., no later than September 1 "because Congress will start picking up steam again then, and Georgia is a lot closer toWashingtonbyphone than California is."

Petpourri

BY JUDITH EISNER

"Equipment" for the pet dog can run the gamut from the barely workable to the ultra-luxurious. A battered pie tin for a feeddish and a frayed length of rope for a collar contrast sharply with shiny stainless steel dishes and imported English saddle leather collars. Somewhere in between is the happy medium of functional, sensibly priced equipment.

Your dog is more concerned with what's in the dish than whether that dish is plastic or limoges. But when it comes to collars and leashes, a certain amount of care must be exercised in their selection.

It has been said that dogs are the most democratic of creatures. They will call a hovel home as well as a mansion. Similarly, they really couldn't care less whether they're wearing a turquoise-blue-and pearls collar or a hunk or rope. It's the dog's owner who insists on the pretty collar and who convinces herself that Frou-Frou really prefers the jewels.

The primary function of a collar is to provide a form of control and restraint; not only to leashes attach to them, but they enable a person to simply "hang on," should the need arise. When the door is opened and you don't want the pup to slip out, it's far more convenient to grasp his collar then the scruff of his neck.

If a collar is to be serviceable in controlling a dog, it must of necessity be strong enough to do so. It also must fit well, for a collar slipped over the dog's ears in time of stress is worthless.

The best all-purpose type of collar is a relatively simple, unadorned, stitched saddle leather. It should have a strongly-attached buckle and an equally strong ring for a leash. Such collars are available in either flat or rolled form, designed to accommodate short or long haired dogs, respectively.

A properly fitted collar permits you to slip two fingers between it and the dog's neck, but will not slip over his head. It must not be so tight as to bind, chafe, or interfere with the dog's breathing.

Matching these collars, which usually come in sensible collars such as brown, black and red, are leather leashes in a variety of widths and lengths. Just as a Dachshund doesn't require a one inch wide collar to control him, he doesn't usually require a wide leash; however, a Great Dane does require the extra strength offered by extra width and thickness.

We are opposed to leashes for several reasons. Held correctly, that is, in such a way as to enable you to control your dog, a leash does not dangle from your wrist; it is held, gathered, in your left hand with the loop around your right. If you have ever had a chain pulled through your hand, you will understand one of our aversions to it. It hurts! Secondly, a chain is a potentially dangerous thing. Hang it around your neck and a flapping end can cause real harm. Slap a dog with it--not that we advocate slapping dogs with leashes--and you can physically hurt the dog. And last, they have an impossible way of knotting through carelessly being tossed aside, and chain knots are awfully infuriating to undo.

While we concede that dogs do not chew through chain, as they have a way of doing to good saddle leather, the leather lead is by far the most practical and satisfactory. A flat leather leash does not tear your fingers if your dog makes a sudden lunge; it isn't icy-cold in winter; it is soft, pliable and safe. Just remember to hang it well out of reach until your puppy stops teething!

Chain collars, or training or "choke" collars are not instruments of torture and serve an important function. They are intended as a training aid, when used correctly since they provide a sudden "snap" action when the slack collar is tightened by a quick jerk. They are not intended to choke or strangle the dog, but to enforce a command.

If you take your dog to an obedience class, the instructor will specify the type of training collar he prefers; it may be of chain links or braided nylon, but will operate on the same snap-release principle.

There are several dangers inherent to training collars. Chief among them is the possibility of the dangling loop end catching on some obstruction and really strangling the dog. Therefore, they should never be left on an unsupervised dog and should certainly be kept off any dog permitted to hunt or roam.

The second danger, more prevalent that of strangulation, is that, incorrectly used, these collars can do physical harm to a dog. If your dog tugs and lunges while on a leash--which, of course, he shouldn't--he can damge his throat and windpipe through the choking action of the collar. Interestingly, these collars, unless used as a training device, don't provide any better control over a dog than a plain leather one. The determined puller will continue to pull even though his breath is whistling and gasping in his throat.

In general, harnesses are not recommended for untrained pets People often mistakenly think a harness is more humane because there is no pulling around the neck. They do not realize that most pet quality harnesses are poorly constructed. The leash ring is atop the shoulders, which means that the strain of controlling the dog is being exerted on his shoulder structure.

In puppies, whose bones are still growing and whose muscles are soft, this strain on the souulders can actually deform them and permanently, impede proper front leg action. Properly built harnesses, such as those utilized on Seeing Eye Dogs or cart-pulling dogs, are made so that the strain is across the chest and carried horizontally backward; there is no upward, displacing pull. And, these harnesses are not used on growing puppies or for restraint. Seeing Eye Dogs wear collars and leashes as well.

Instead of buying your dog's collar and leash on impulse, or because it's a pretty pink color, consider it's function as well as the dog it is intended to fit. Honest brown leather on a dog can be just as attractive as all the rhinestones in the world, and it will last longer and do a better job in the long run.

STRUM TO ENGLAND

Robert D. Strum, associate professor of electrical engineering at the Naval Postgraduate School and a Carmel resident for the past 12 years, left Tuesday for Bath, England, for a sabbatical year combined with a Fulbright-Hays Fellowship.

With him was his research partner, John R. Ward of Monterey, professor of the same department at USN-PGS, who has co-authored four textbooks on engineering education, published by Prentice-Hall.

The two men will be associated with the Bath University of Technology in a project to apply educational techniques to improve engineering education.

Accompanying Strum were his wife, their daughter Sarah, 12, and son Arthur, 8.

During their absence their Carmel home will be occupied by Lt. and Mrs. Carlos Tromben and their four-year-old son. Lt. Tromben, of the Chilean navy, is a student at the Navy School's Aeronautical Engineering Curriculum.

A HOLIDAY MOOD

I had a strong feeling that the 4th of July would be foggy, so my friend Don Hartman and I decided to drive to Carmel Valley to view the art scene and also soak up a little sun. Our main objective was the White Oak Gallery in the Village, as Jim Kramer had told us several Carmel artists were showing there. (More about Jim in a minute).

We were met by Marian Wilson, the owner of the gallery, and asked to make ourselves as home in the charming building under the old oak trees. The two small rooms were hung with paintings, and I was particularly impressed by the colorful primitives of E. Melvin Bolstad. Each was chock full of activity and bright colors which were a delight to the eye.

Nancy Johnson had a very nice watercolor of a barn and field which was almost impressionistic in its approach. Helen Gapen Oehler was represented by a rich oil of several boats tied up at a wharf. Her style emphasizes subtlety of color applied in a strong, impressionistic manner.

Andrew Kozak was showing about eight of his pencil drawings of animals and birds. Here is pencil drawing at its finest, and each animal seems to have its own personality. I only wish that they were presented with a little more space around them, as they seemed crowded by the frames.

I asked in particular to see Jim Kramer's work, as I first knew Jim a few years ago when he began to paint seriously again, and I was anxious to see his newest work. His medium is watercolor, and he handles it very well indeed. His subject matter comes principally from scenes in the Gold Country, and I liked best his old house in Nevada City, which seemed to tell a complete story. Two small paintings, one of a typical Gothic style home, and the other of a bright red old horse drawn fire engine, were particularly outstanding.

I had met Jim at Don Hartman Framing the day before, and he caught me up on the activities of his family. Daughter Sue and her husband Dave Erickson, both Carmel High graduates, are attending Cal at Berkeley. Dave has received the only $1,000 Forestry School Grant to be given for next year. Daughter Joan, also a Carmel High graduate, is living in Berkeley and working at a fabric shop. Part of her pay is four free patterns a month, so the sewing machine is working overtime when she had time off. Jim hopes to be showing his paintings at Perry House in mid-July.

xxx

Bob Davey, owner of R. Davey Gallery in Su Vecino Court, phoned the other day with the news that his son and daughter-in-law, both Carmel High graduates and currently attending California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, will have a two-man show of their work in the Green Room at the Tantamount Theatre in Carmel Valley. Mark will be exhibiting graphics and Melissa her batik and patchwork banners. The show will be there for the month of July.

xxx

In addition to the colorful Mexican costume exhibit at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art on Pacific Street, one can also see five works of art done by Carmel High students following a Bicentennial theme. Steve Taylor had done a very imaginative watercolor on wood construction showing the growth of Monterey over the years. Randy Bowman's watercolor of the wharf is excellent technique for a young artist. Melissa Manke is represented by a construction collage of Cannery Row and Milton Williams has created a stained glass window of Carmel Bay. Lastly, Shelley Cost has an abstract oil representing the early Conquistadores.

xxx

At Seaside City Hall during the month of July can be seen the works of two Peninsula painters. Elmer Ekeroth of Pacific Grove has oil paintings, and Stephen Hennessy, a member of Carmel Art Association, is showing oil pastels of local scenes.

xxx

Saturday from 11 to 5 is the day for the Annual Artist's Studio Open House Tour, presented by the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. This year the tour features studios in the Carmel Valley area, but several Carmelites are represented, namely Jean Wilsdon, Joe Feuerborn, and Eldon Dedini. This annual event is always worthwhile as it affords the rare chance to visit the actual studios of our peninsula artists.

xxx

For the summer months the Carmel Art Association is featuring membership shows in all its rooms rather than one-man shows, which will resume in the Fall. The July show is one of the most outstanding in quite some time and deserves comment on some of the better works.

In the Beardsley Room the realistic landscapes of Jack Bevier are particularly outstanding for their use of negative space and unusual composition. The large barn scene in oil by Edward Norton Ward is extremely rich in color and painting technique.

The small figure by Keith Lindberg has a Van Gogh-like approach with much more brilliant color. Keith's smaller paintings seem to show his fine painting ability more than his larger canvases.

In the main gallery I found a very fresh watercolor by Jeanne Bellmer; a handsome, large cypress tree by S.C. Yuan which treated a tired subject matter in an exciting way; two figures by Victor DiGesu in his strong pseudo-Matisse style; and a beautifully colored landscape by A. Terrill.

Howard Bradford was showing two serigraphs which bring out the strength of his medium, and in the lobby was a mixed medium painting by Marlinde von Ruhs, which utilized gold leaf as well as drawing technique.

To me, however, the painting which deserves special recognition was the study in blue of figures by Dick Crispo. I have seen a lot of Dick's work, and this painting far surpasses most of his current things. He has broken away from the ghoulish, cartoon-like characters and shows here that he really knows the substance of drawing and painting.

xxx

Zantman Galleries, 6th and Dolores, is featuring two outstanding artists in a special exhibit beginning Saturday. Gerald Paul Stinski will be showing his "trompe l'oeil" still-lifes, and Gunnar Anderson his paintings of children and California landscapes.

xxx

Had a nice chat with Edith Dinkin in her new gallery in L'Espalier Court on Saturday, and remarked about her new technique of doing impressionistic or design landscapes using cut and folded paper. On display also are her "complete" oils which utilize all surfaces of the canvas.

xxx

Danskin's Gallery of Imagination has just moved to a new location on Dolores south of Ocean and is now called Richard Danskin's Gallery.

xxx

A three-woman show of enamel work opens Sunday at the Village Gallery on Del Fino in Carmel Valley Village. The three artists are Avis Ballard, Kathryn Russell and Ann Berthoin.

Stinski, Anderson in show at Zantman

"I seek serenity rather than controversy in my work, I attempt to paint a quality that exudes calmness and peaceful enjoyment."—these are the words of Gerald Stinski, whose works along with those of Gunnar Anderson will open July 11 at the Zantman Galleries for three weeks.

Stinski's past history is unusual for an artist. After attending the St. Camillus Monastery in Milwaukee for scholastic preparation for the priesthood, he realized, after five years, that it was not his metier. Then, he made a dramatic decision and joined the US Navy.

Although he previously had no art training, as a draughtsman in the Navy, he realized his great talent and potential for drawing and painting. It was the beginning of his career in art.

Today, after many one-man shows and exhibits in galleries and museums throughout the country, with his magnificent "trompe l'oeil" work in the collections of many notable and discerning people, he is established and recognized as one of the finest artists in this particular style of still-life.

Gunnar Anderson who shares the Zantman Art Galleries with Stinski, just now is a painter of children. His paintings are quite often studies of his own young children and their friends. He looks for and captures the moments so meaningful to childhood—balancing along the top of a brick wall, the first bicycle, or playing hop-scotch.

Born in 1927 in Berkeley, he studied for two years at the San Francisco Art Institute, and graduated from the Art Center in Los Angeles. He is represented in leading art galleries in Los Angeles, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Castle in Carmel sold

The Castle in Carmel gift shop on Dolores has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hall, who will move here from Chicago to operate the shop and become Carmelites. The Halls have visited the area before and are anxious to live and work here.

Georgiana Radke, who presently owns and manages Castle in Carmel, is retiring this month, but will continue to reside in Carmel.

Castle in Carmel is one of the oldest establishments in the city, and the Halls plan to continue operating the shop in the way it has been previously, with one change. Mrs. Hall is an artist, and she will have her work on display in addition to the items presently offered.

The business will change hands officially on July 15.

Hidden Valley musicians to play at Town House

Young artists of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars will present an intimate concert next Wednesday, 2:30 p.m., at Carmel Foundation's Town House on Lincoln below Eighth. Members and prospective members are invited to attend and to stay for tea after the program.

Hidden Valley Seminars is a local, non-profit organization, interested in fostering the growth of young musicians and in making scholarship aid available to those who require it. Accepting only 68 students for each of two five-week summer sessions, the faculty is able to give close individual guidance to each student, carrying out their aim to develop the "total musician."

'People-watching' at Eastwood

By GERRY COUGHLIN

The next-best thing to watching the play at sporting events such as the Crosby and the Clint Eastwood Invitational Celebrity Tennis Tournament, Fourth of July weekend fare at Pebble Beach—is "people watching."

The successful inauguration of the Eastwood, dubbed in honor of movie leading man Clint Eastwood, brought out not only some 95 prestigious tennis players and hundreds of spectators but the round of social events were as dazzling as the weather.

At the end of play on Friday, a sparkling champagne reception for players was held at Del Monte's Beach and Tennis Club, co-hosted by one of the recipients of the proceeds. The newly-formed Women's Division, charitable arm of the National Council on Alcoholism, Monterey Peninsula chapter, sponsored the bash at which several hundred guests assembled in every conceivable form of dress to welcome the glamorous tennis afficionados. Heads turned and flashbulbs popped with the arrival of the beautiful and the bizarre who spilled out onto the poolside patio for dancing al fresco in the plushest setting this side of Wimbledon.

In addition to glittering pantsuits, and daring see-throughs, were men wearing peace headbands and colorful jackets to match. Desi Arnaz, Jr. clad in a khaki bush jacket escorted a demure Kim Darby, feminine star of "True Grit," wearing a flowered print Victorian gown.

General (Ret.) and Mrs. Edwin C. Wright of Carmel (Polly was chairman of the program and advertising sales) enjoyed the festivities along with Carmelites. Mrs. Georgia Von Richter and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sippel, she a W.D. member in charge of ticket sales.

Carmel Restauranteur Ivan Nopert, who swings a mean tennis racquet, and Walter Becker also of this city held their own in competition with James Garner, Barry McKay, tennis pro on tour and former football greats-turned-net-jumpers such as Jim Brown, Jack (Moose) Myers and Matt Hazeltine.

The Saturday night barbeque and fireworks affair at the Lodge brought out close to 1,000 persons who joined the celebrities for an evening of revelry.

Box holders for the matches included Sidney Frohman of Carmel, Jean Post and William Blauer and the D. Kirk Davidsons of Carmel Valley.

Mrs. Frohman of Carmel, president of the Women's Division, entertained with an impromptu cocktail party on Saturday night honoring her player houseguests, Mr. Arnaz and Don Marshall, popular star of the television series, "Land of the Giants."

A newcomes to the area, Mr. Robert C. Sproul of Carmel Meadows, was the winner of a painting donated by Richard Hamilton, local artist.

Lucky winners of the Eastwood were presented with beautiful hand-sculptured trophies given by noted Carmel sculptor and tournament player, Malcolm Morna.

CLAUDINE LONGET scored, as she and her partner, Jack Bowker won the mixed doubles in the Eastwood Celebrity Tournament.

Sunrise to Sunset

As this column "sunrise to Sunset" is pondered upon by your manager, the words are reluctant to form sentences, as I want so much to express the enthusiasm I feel for the total development of the many possibilities for Sunset Center. To coordinate all of the Arts into a stimulating nucleus of activity for the Carmel area and the Monterey Peninsula as well, is a just and inspiring goal, enriching the lives of youth and adults alike. "To dream the impossible dream" and strive for this ultimate reality, is an overwhelming feat to contemplate, however, dream we must, think we must, and to act upon these thoughts, an absolute necessity.

I begin this dream by thinking in terms of the space that is HERE & NOW; such as the former gymnasium-a likely spot to refurbish into a much needed multi-purpose room. This could serve as a hall for lectures, Seminars, Conferences, Book Reviews, Chamber Music Groups, just to mention a few. Already, our former principal's office is now a showcase for our studio artists, or special guest artist displays, as well as housing the personnel to manage the Center. I invite you to drop in, to view these special exhibits as they are set up. As each new center of activity is completed, the scope broadens and the ultimate goal is closer to fulfillment.

As we develop our "Artists in Action" programs, more and more, a theme is evolving to give added significance to the center, such as honoring one of the late contemporary residents of the Arts, whether it be literature, Music, Art or Dance. Many a famous citizen has called this Peninsula home, and as time goes by we shall seek to honor this great individual, who has enriched our lives by his sheer dedication to his talent in the Arts.

Another Goal I hope we shall attain and perhaps the most relevant to this word culture, is expanding and upgrading the current class schedules to reach out to students of all ages, and in all of the Arts. In spite of current events that might dictate otherwise, our young people must be our salvation. There is much talent to cultivate, and Sunset can certainly serve this most worthy of all purposes.

I am proposing these thoughts and I would so enjoy hearing from you, either by a visit, a letter, or a call...624-3996. To attain even one of these goals, the Cultural Commission, our City Council, and I, all must have your enthusiastic support. This is our challenge, lets face it together.

'Theatre, by its nature, is community theatre'

Dan Cawthon is directing "Wonderful Town" which opens Friday at the Circle Community Theatre. He has been a professor of literature, music and drama at St. Francis Jr. College in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and is currently mid-way in a doctoral program probing the relation of theatre to contemporary society. The program is sponsored jointly by Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary.

Cawthon is the founding director of the Center for Christian Renewal in Oklahoma City. He holds bachelors degrees in philosophy and theology and a master's degree in literature.

By DAN CAWTHON

Most every philosopher of western civilization has recognized that there is an intimate relationship between a society and its theatre. Plato carefully outlined the role which the stage was to play in his Republic; Aristotle's Poetics continue to serve as the starting point for dramatic criticism. Hegel, Neitzsche, Kierkegaard and Tillich have each given due time and space to the relation between tragedy and their respective visions of the life process.

Shakespeare called the stage a "mirror" of society. It is a microscopic version of our age—and if we would search for a reflection of our culture (or that of any other society), the image of ourselves is to be found on the stages of our theatres.

From such a perspective, it is curious to witness the state of American theatre as it rounds the corner of history in the seventies. Living in an age which in many respects has been challenged to re-examine all of its value systems (be they political economic, moral or whatever), directions for the future appear to be more and more uncertain. This uncertainty—or standstill, if you will—is reflected in the theatre of our day.

New York theatre is a theatre of extremes. This past season has witnessed a most peculiar interest in reviving older, more secure works (Private Lives, Harvey, and Time of Your Life to mention but a few). More established stars head the cast lists, even in roles for which they are not totally suited. With the exception of Sam Sheppard, whose Operation Sidewinder was performed by Lincoln Center's Repertory Theatre, there is little sign of an emergence of new, creative playwrights.

At the other extreme, nude theatre has found its way from off to on Broadway. The experimental pieces in the village have become monied interests off Times Square. As nude theatre, it is only skin deep. Briefly, the mirror reflects a culture which is being challenged to take a look at its surface in order to re-establish (or perhaps to establish for the first time) conviction about its own identity.

Which is not all bad. The state of our theatre is but a barometer of our cultural climate. When it appears to have lost its depth—its soul—much is to be learned about the state of society.

And that's what theatre is all about. When Hamlet chose to employ the village actors to assist him in discovering the hidden imposthume which had caused rot in the state of Denmark, he seemed to have a fairly clear notion of the role which theatre has to play. "The play's the thing," he remarks, "to catch the conscience of the king."

Catching consciences is the business of the stage. Drama was born out of the Greek civilization's attempt to embody, through form, the ultimate and basic questions which existence had to offer. Indeed, the mark of civilized man in the history of Western culture was his ability to reflect upon, and give form to, the meaning of his most profound experiences.

Not surprisingly, drama and religious experience were in many respects the same. For it was in the theatrical arena that the Greek civilization mirrored the ultimate concerns of its life. The tragedians of that era were challenged to probe, to uncover, to stage, through the drama, the basic questions of existence.

The theatre, then, is a reflection of the questions which a society dares to raise for itself. Theatre, by its nature, is community theatre. It makes an implicit demand on its audience to permit it to probe, with the community, the questions which pertain to their most profound experiences.

Such probing is sometimes painful—it is always productive of growth. Theatre has experienced its finest moments at those times when mankind has allowed itself to look squarely at the appearances in its mirror.

The theatre of the '70s then, may well be in a period of waiting. It has suffered the battle scars of a decade which, more often than not, has relegated it to the category of pastime. It has frequently been prostitutized. "There's no business like show business" and monied interests have, at times, catered to the fear of audiences—thus turning the theatre into an "entertainment having the same effect as a tranquillizer. The theatre is used as a way to "drop out" from the responsibility of encountering the meaning of ourselves.

Theatre is, to be sure, recreation. And to re-create oneself is to imitate the work of creation. It does not mean to become passive—to be soothed with false emotion. Rather, it suggests a "putting back together" of the center of our persons, and such recreation is far and away the most important of all our actions.

If the theatre of our day is to reflect a creative culture, suspicion must be cast on the false prophets of art. Re-creating oneself through music does not mean listening to muzak in the dentist's office. To become whole through painting does not mean reading the cartoons in the newspaper. To discover the meaning of one's person through drama does not mean to treat theatre as an after-dinner drink.

Stuart Vaughn, in his new book on A Possible Theatre, has set forth strong arguments for the hope that "community theatre" has the potential for being a vital and creative force in American cultural growth. It has remained most free of the financiers who use theatre as a means to make profit off the public, and has generally found community support in its initial attempts.

However, as Vaughn suggests, community theatre cannot survive without a daring populace which is consciously searching for the meaning of itself. When such a quest is present, the theatre stands, in the community, as a haven for those who would dare to encounter the mirror of themselves. When the quest is lacking, the theatre becomes a stage-version of muzak—pacifying but tranquillizing its audience.

The community theatre is, then, more than an opportunity for tax deduction. Unlike community drives, chests, hospitals, or what have you, the theatre is community by its definition. It can be true to itself only when its audience searches truth regarding its most profound meaning.

'Wonderful Town' opens Friday at Circle Theatre

"Wonderful Town," the Leonard Bernstein musical, will open Friday night at the Circle Theatre, Carmel, to round out the Summer '70 Musical Theatre Season of the Monterey Peninsula Community Theatre, which opened recently with Cole Porter's "Anything Goes."

As the musical version of Jerome Chodorov's "My Sister Eileen," "Wonderful Town" chronicles the saga of two sisters from Colombus, Ohio, as they pursue their careers from a Greenwich Village basement to success in that "Wonderful Town," New York City during the mid-thirties. Ruth, the elder sister, is all thumbs as far as romance is concerned, as she laments in "100 Easy Ways to Lose a Man." While Eileen, the younger of the two, has no difficulty in winning over the entire New York police force as well as most of the Brazilian Navy!

Ruth will be played by Joyce Malikoff, no stranger to Circle audiences, having played three leading roles this season: Doris W. in "Owl and the Pussycat," Irene Livingston in "Light Up the Sky," and Genevieve Barlow in the highly successful Circle production, "Three Bags Full." She was also seen as Tituba in the Circle's widely acclaimed staging of "The Crucible."

Ruth's romantic interest will be supplied by Scott Channing, a newcomer to the Circle Stage and the Peninsula area. Scott has had a wide variety of experience in professional musical theater and dance. On the dancing side, he has appeared with the San Francisco, Harkness, and Radio City ballet companies. Scott has also appeared in several musicals on the Broadway stage.

"Wonderful Town" will play July 10, 11, 12; 15th through 19th, then alternate weeks with "Anything Goes." Performances are Wednesday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. until August 30th at the Circle Theatre, Casanova Street between 8th and 9th Carmel.

Reservations may be made directly to the theatre, Box AL, or by phone, 624-2669. All seats are $3.00, with special rates for students and enlisted military personnel with ID cards.

THE BEYER STRING TRIO

Beyer String Trio to open Carmel summer concert season

The City of Carmel is once again sponsoring the Summer Concert Season at Forest Theater, situated in the pines on Mountain View and 8th St., Carmel. Ten concerts in all, are scheduled, beginning July 12 through September 13. The public is welcome, and admission is free. To those new in the area, Forest Theatre is an outdoor theater and represents great tradition in the theater in Carmel, and tho' a bit breezy at times, a grand time is had by all.

Many of the former groups programmed at Forest Theater are again returning this year, among them, The Beyer String Trio, former resident musicians of Monterey, having returned to the West Coast after an absence of two years, will again appear in a concert on Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

The trip, consisting of Helen Beyer, violinist; Erwin Gordon, violinist; and Elaine Beyer, cellist, will be joined by one of Carmel's resident pianists, Fred Schaad, in a performance of the Mozart Piano Quartet in G Minor, and the Mendelssohn piano quartet in F Minor. In addition, The Beyer Trio will perform Hadyn's String Trio Opus 53, No. 1 in G Major.

'The Fantasticks' makes a spectacular return

There's no doubt at all that the "The Fantasticks" now playing at the Carmel Valley Inn is a superb production.

It opened last week, jointly staged by the Inn and the Studio Theatre, and will continue through the summer, playing weekends in a beautiful Carmel Valley setting.

The credits, and they are deservedly generous, must start with the director Jeffrey Jones.

Even on a small theatre-in-the-round stage, he has captured the aura and essence of this unusual musical, and theatre goers who see it can well understand why it has long been an American classic.

It is a kind of fable about human beings, with stories within stories, and a tumbling kind of action that is a unique blend of theatrical hyperbole -- fascinating indeed if the players project what the audience has a right to feel.

This the cast, and it is consistently excellent, does supremely well.

Terry Eby as the Narrator and commentator on life, as well as his alter ego, El Gallo, has the bearing that the play requires if it is to be cohesive, and understandable. And the voice to provide the extra meaning that establishes the theme of what "The Fantasticks" is really all about, the memorable "Try to Remember".

April Curtis as The Girl and John Wilson as The Boy radiate the wonder of young love, as well as its tribulations and its mystery. Their duets are a pure delight.

As The Fathers, Jim Ferguson and Sander Watkins provide a full measure of counter-point to the young lovers, and comedy both in lines and song that give "The Fantastiks" its special flavor. Their rendition of "Plant a Radish" is one of the highlights of the evening.

Mike Curtis and Mike Star, as the ploys of El Gallo, are simply wonderful. Incidental to the telling of this unusual story, they add some of the dramatic highlights that make "The Fantasticks" so unexpectedly enjoyable.

What can one say of Geoffrey Cocks, the mute symbol of props and staging except to say he is always at the right place at the right time.

Shelia Jo White as musical director and Karen Watkins as set designer add their special talents to this very special production.

The Carmel Valley Inn's expecially delectable buffet dinner adds its share to a delightful evening of informal theatre.

Theatre goers of all ages won't want to miss this bright addition to the summer theatrical season, which surely must be one of the best ever. GMD

THE BOY and THE GIRL (John Wilson and April Curtis) are starring roles in "The Fantasticks', which was received enthusiastically when it opened last week at the Carmel Valley Inn.

Story hours for pre-schoolers now at library

VISION CARE

by Dr. R.E. Marlin, Consulting Optometrist

How often should you blink your eyes?

Dear Miss J.B.

The normal blink rate is 20 to 30 times a minute. Almost half the time you are awake your eyes are closed. Think of the nervous and muscular energy required to open and close your eyes 30,000 times -- day after day. Blinking is necessary to keep the eye moist. If the cornea were to dry out, you would lose your vision.

Why do contact lenses make you blink so much?

If fit properly, they don't make you blink. Mostly its that you are now conscious of blinking, and at first feel the lid go over the edge of the lens. If the blinking doesn't return to normal, you may need different lenses.

This Adorable House offers you all those features you so often ask for but so rarely find -- south of Ocean Avenue -- close to beach and shops -- entry hall -- large living room with fireplace -- large dining room -- kitchen, modern with all built-in appliances -- laundry -- 2 bedrooms, 2 baths -- oodles of commodious closets, top notch construction, superb condition. So attractive, to see it is to want it for yourself. $47,500

Redolent of the times when the home was the center of one's life, this older estate-type property, of approximately 1¼ acres in Hatton Fields, sits high on a hill with sweeping views. The home is quite large, not ostentatious, just homey and protective. There are many rooms, adaptable to such use as you see fit – 5 or 6 bedrooms, 3 baths, reception room, den, sunrooms, dining room, large country kitchen, game room, etc. But withal not burdensome to maintain. The grounds with many ancient trees, are largely natural, requiring little upkeep. If you have a need for a very special kind of place, with lots of room and little responsibility, in which to do your thing, maybe even to raise a happy brood, this would be just the place to do it. Close to everything, butserenelyprivate. By the way, there may be an additional, saleable building site. Owner will finance. Asking $125,000.

Letters to Editor

Tony Limber
c/o Editor
Carmel Pine Cone

Dear Tony:

I'm writing this for my dog Sean who died a year ago this July.

He was a black and white Smooth Collie who was a regular at the Village Corner. Sean had an appointed set of rounds which he made every day.

He would walk me to work in the morning and then he would stop by the Village Corner for a snack on his way home. Later in the day, around 2:00 p.m. he would stop by Tom Brown's Insurance Agency where they kept a bowl of water for him.

Then if the door was open, into Irving Lundbords to check on the market.

At five he would pick me up and walk me home.

Sean would have admired your spunk, Tony, he picked up two tickets himself.

Finally, I had to lock old Sean up in our small backyard. He never could understand what he'd done wrong.

Less than a month after he realized he couldn't leave the yard on his own anymore, he died. Two of our local vets checked him, but neither could find anything physically wrong.

My wife Anne and I think he died of a broken heart.

It seems strange to us that a town with a library containing a painting of a big ole mongrel that was known for wandering the streets, could pass such a law.

Anyway, good luck Tony...Sean would have been proud to know you.

The article by Colonel C. Austin DeCamp in your most recent edition is a splendid tribute to our day of National Independence, to those things which made it possible, and that for which it stands.

That we should commemorate the Fourth of July in a more personal and profound sense than has been the case of late years cannot be gainsaid.

It is, therefore, a great satisfaction to find a publisher who will devote space, as you have, for an expression of patriotic respect for all those blessings which this day in history has made possible. Blessings not only for ourselves, but for uncounted millions throughout the world around whose shoulders we have from time to time wrapped our cloak of liberty and independence.

I sincerely trust that we shall be seeing other articles from the pen of Colonel DeCamp as time goes on. Again, my congratualtions to you for materially assisting in a greatly needed resurgence of patriotism.

Sincerely,

I read with interest, your article entitled "Merchants React to Proposal to Regulate Store Displays," in the July 2nd edition.

This article quotes James Peter Cost, President of the Carmel Business Association as saying, "Currently, we have control over the exterior signs and displays, but still insufficient control over those interior parts which are visible from the street.—If good taste has to be regulated, then let's regulate it."

The article goes on to state that Henri Corbat "stated flatly, I'm for it. There's too much junk in the store windows in Carmel. A lot of shops should be cleaned up."

Bayless, Corbat, Cost, Sutton: who are they to set themselves up as dictators of interior decorating Carmel shops—Are we living in Russia or in Carmel-by-the-Sea?

Dear Editor:

Enjoyed reading the article in your Pine Cone paper—"Can Our Schools Provide Valid, Meaningful Education?"

We have friends who live in Carmel and are frequent visitors to your beautiful city. I'm enclosing a short article on the subject of education, showing the hopeful side. I hope you will print it.

First, we must make learning more attractive. The Light of Knowledge must be a warm light, if it is to kindle a responsive flame in others. A teacher must be able to arouse enthusiasm. The mind, which is non-magnetic, is like an engine out of gear. Magnetism, the Power of Attraction, is a quality solely of Life Itself. How to develop a magnetic mind? There is a method whereby the mind can become magnetic.

We hear much talk about drop-outs at the High School Level. Why are they drop-outs? In most cases it is the improper functioning of certain brain centers, and all they need is the proper stimulus and nourishment in order to develop to their full capacity. My many years of experience as an educator in the public schools and owner of a private school, has proven most drop-outs possess potentials UNLIMITED.

Where have we gone wrong? Perhaps one of the first stumbling blocks has been that we in America have gotten education confused with schooling. What is the present day concept of the commencement exercises which are held at the High School, College and University levels? Far too many persons still look upon it as an end product. In truth, it's when self-education must begin. With diploma in hand is the invitation to begin delving into the unused rooms of the mind. Commencement means 'to begin' another challenge for progressive man.

We in America have achieved great things in the physical sciences; we are more affluent, possess more physical comforts, enjoy a greater freedom from epidemic proportions of disease, yet we do not manage our individual lives or solve the problems of our society or education with skill! WHY? Because we have not created enough magnetic minds in our young people. The mind is the creative tool of man, and he must learn how to teach and develop this creative quality in the process of education. Without the magnetic quality of mind, man will still find himself lurking in the dark unused rooms of his mind. The next important step, we must help the student develop self-identification.

Humanity is at a new cross-road, more serious than that of any prior cross-roads! Today, so many of our intelligent young people wonder if there is really any room left to be one's self? Yes, there is a way, teach them how to make their own mind more magnetic, and with it, they will affect constructive change. Today the real challenge lies in CHANGE and how to handle this change.

Formal education is a very important first step, and with intelligence we must determine what is worth keeping from past experiences; what should be changed and what should be dropped.

Things do not just happen; they are formed by what man THINKS. It is a fact, that when a mind has been trained to be magnetic, it will create constructively, and not destructively.

Many of our young people are yearning to know this fact of Right and Truth, which can and must be included in their educational process of learning in the near future. With constructive change the general level of intelligence can be raised from which can spring the GREAT THINKERS of the tomorrows just ahead.

Observe nature, and see how it operates on this absolute Law of Change. Man, identified with self, will then understand his true status with Life and Nature and his environment.

We cannot afford to leave the whole subject of change on the educational and social levels to our elected public leaders; you the individual citizen must become involved, but first, on the level of the mind, in order to develop the dynamic thoughts that can lead to constructive action, and everyone begins pulling together, whereby your individual influence will be felt on the final outcome.

Together in Unity we can begin to share this constructive need and thus help bring about a more meaningful type of education for all.

Now is the alloted time for man to begin to exercise his greater intellectual abilities. Our immediate objective: to have more minds infused with the magnetic mind quality, and of course, we must start on the educational level.

Remember, the great American dream of our founding fathers was to have a system of universal education, and with it, produce a literate people expressing true love for their fellowman, and thus develop a Permanent Peace For All.

Again I say, we in America on the ecucational, social and political levels, still possess potential UNLIMITED!

Carmel

This fascinating Mediterranean villa, on a knoll one block above the beach, commands sweeping Point Lobos to Pebble Beach ocean views from each of its three levels.

A carved gate leads from a parking area into the enchantment of stone-paved terraces bordered by flowerbeds, shrubbery and trees amidst which nestle a fountain and lily pond.

Opening off the landscaped entrance lanai are the library (with fireplace), the dining room and a bedroom. Another bedroom suite on this level has its own heated lanai where orchids grow under a spreading vine.

The huge Normandy kitchen has a fireplace, built-in couch, artist-designed tile work and skylight. Built by artisans, it was painstakingly planned for gourmet cooking and is an informal living center for family and friends.

On the second level is the charming living room. The glory of sunsets can be enjoyed, seated about the fireplace, through French doors which open on to an ocean view terrace.

Up another staircase is a third level penthouse bedroom suite with rooftop sundeck and panoramic view of Carmel Bay.

There is ample area on the one-third acre fenced site for a guest house and swimming pool. This unique property is within the Carmel city limits. Its price is $150,000.

May we show it to you?
